CompHealth to Host 12th Annual Symposium in Park City, Utah

SALT LAKE CITY (February 7, 2007)—CompHealth, a CHG Healthcare Services company, will host its 12th annual Symposium at the Grand Summit Resort Hotel in Park City, Utah Feb. 8-10. Invited guests include CompHealth clients from healthcare systems throughout the U.S.

This year's keynote speaker will be Dan Clark, a Speaker Hall of Fame member who has inspired millions of people for over 25 years. Achievers North America and Achievers Europe named Mr. Clark one of the "Top 10 Speakers in the World." He will present, "You Can't Quit, It's a League Rule."

The Symposium began 12 years ago as a client appreciation day for CompHealth and has evolved into a three-day event with more of an educational focus. It is designed to bring together physician recruiters from across the country and provide them the opportunity to share industry insights, discuss changes within the healthcare field, and to bring about a better understanding of how to meet the ever-changing demands of their jobs.

This year's event will include two days of curriculum and a full day of recreation at the Canyons Resort in Park City. The educational sessions will focus on changes in the healthcare industry, as well as various issues facing physician recruiters. Fred Bayon, Associate Director of the Healthcare Advisory Board, will present the findings of a yearlong study on the future of hospital-physician relations and compensation. Sue Hershkowitz-Coore, one of the top business speakers in the country, will present how to best utilize e-mail and Annette Simmons, a behavioral scientist, will provide insight into how to understand the roots of territoriality.

"As the leading provider of outsourced recruiting and staffing services to the physician recruitment community, CompHealth is pleased to take a leadership position once again in presenting this world-class forum for educational and networking opportunities," said Michael Weinholtz, President and CEO of CHG Healthcare Services.

CompHealth President Mark Law added, "The Symposium is a tremendous educational opportunity for our clients and another way that we try to enhance our service to them. This is the 12th year since its inception and with world-class speakers, and over 70 attendees from prestigious healthcare facilities across the country, we believe that it will be our best yet."
